The Antiseptic Scalp Medicine—

One morning when the brazen sun rose over the hills and began again to pour its hatred into the valley. the doctor told him as gently as possible that the end was near and that he must prapare himself. It was merely aquestion of time, now, a question of hors, when the tired hear would cease to function. Gloria

DON'T BLAME THE SHOE MAN

THE minute a hide comes off the back of a cow, it's taxed; when it goes through the tannery, the tanner is taxed; when it goes through the shoe factory, the shoe manufacturer pays still further taxes; when the pair of shoes gets to your local shoe man, he too must pay taxes; when the shoes get onto your feet, you may not be conscious of all these taxes, but you know the price you've paid for the shoes, and after a little thought, you know that much of the price you've paid is because of taxes.

Shoe prices are going up. Your shoe man can't help it. He has no control over the increase of prices brought about by governmental activities and expenditures. He'll have little to say about having to pay his part of the loss occasioned by governmental participation in the electric light and power business at less than cost. The government will have to make up those losses through the collection of taxes which your shoe man, and you, must eventually pay-even though this tax may not be labelled "To pay for losses in operation of governmental electric business."
